SCHEDULE "A"
REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

The property at 400 Eglinton Avenue West is designated for its cultural resource value or interest. The Eglinton Theatre opened in 1936 on Eglinton Avenue West near Avenue Road as the flagship theatre of the Famous Players chain in the "uptown" area of Toronto. The building is architecturally significant as an award-winning example of the work of Toronto architects Karplan and Sprachman, a firm noted for its theatre designs. The Eglinton Theatre operated as a single-screen movie house for over 60 years.

The Eglinton Theatre blends features of the Art Deco and Art Moderne styles popularized during the 1930's. The heritage attributes of the building are found on the south exterior walls and the flat roofs, and on the interior of the theatre. The ell-shaped plan incorporates the theatre entrance and auditorium, with a commercial block at the intersection of the parts. The two-storey commercial block has commercial openings in the first floor and flat-headed window openings for the second-storey offices. To the east, the theatre entrance doors flank a semi-circular box office composed of stainless steel and bent plate glass. Poster display boxes are placed on either side of the glass doors. Above a projecting canopy, a sign tower with a tiered pylon spells "EGLINTON" in vertical letters. While the box office, canopy and tower have been altered, they remain integral components of the design.

On the interior, the spatial arrangement of the theatre is significant. The lobby leads into a vestibule, down to a foyer with a waiting room, across a lounge, and up through the vomitory to the auditorium. The two-storey lobby contains a stepped recess on the north wall, while a circular recess marks the ceiling in the foyer. The waiting room originally displayed a plaster-clad fireplace beneath a circular mirror. An archway separates the foyer from the lounge where the opening to the vomitory is flanked by shallow alcoves. The extended single-storey clear-span auditorium features a rectangular plan with a cross-aisle dividing the orchestra and loge circles. Important features in the auditorium are the coved ceiling, the Art Deco inspired light fixtures mounted on and suspended along the side walls (north and south), the configuration of the projection booth on the east wall and, at the west end, the proscenium, that is flanked by single doorway where a pair of classical sculptures of unclothed female figures surmount the "EXIT" signs in Art Deco lettering.
