SCHEDULE "A"

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

Although not original to its current site, this log cabin has a direct association with the development and early years of recreational skiing activity in the Town of Caledon by area residents and ski enthusiasts from Toronto and more distant locations. During the Second World War, it was associated with Norwegians (and others) who were in Canada as part of the British Commonwealth War Air Training Plan. Likely built in the early- to mid-1930s, the cabin's round log construction type—with the logs exposed on the interior and exterior, and with extended ends at the interlocking corners—originated in Scandinavia and Eastern Europe. This rustic style, adopted by American and Canadian Park Services beginning in the late 19th century, is used for Ontario ski lodges and chalets as a tribute to the Scandinavian origins of skiing and the rustic, natural wood construction of mountain ski cabins. The use of oversized metal door hinges, bolts, and shaped reinforcing bars on the cabin's south entrance door is both a Scandinavian influence and an early 20th century Arts and Crafts Revival period element.

The 1963 relocation and reassembly of the cabin and the subsequent alterations that added a basement, fireplaces, bedrooms, a change in entranceways, replacement windows and floors, and other upgrades are part of the evolution of the structure and have not altered its ambience and charm as a traditional log cabin in a natural setting.
