"Storrington", The Lockhart-Moogk House, 1817,
289 Simcoe Street, (N.W. corner Simcoe and Gage Streets),
Part Lot 140, Plan 86,
Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario

This is another typical house form of the Niagara area, a gable roof with end chimneys, five bay front of two storeys with a centre hall plan and a rear kitchen, storey and a half wing. The house is of brick, now finished in smooth stucco jointed to imitate cut stone probably an early finish to protect the masonry. Sash are restored to the original divisions of twelve over twelve panes, the entrance door-case with six panelled door, and much-divided sidelights and transom, the latter mainly intact. Original interior detail includes two mantelpieces, architraves to openings and staircase. Other compatible trim and joinery, by Carl Banke, was added to complement the original.

The house now stands on a smaller corner lot subdivided from the original two acre holding, part of which was set aside for the relocation of the Butler House.

Reasons for the designation include the historical connections of the house with its first owner, an important local personage, William Lockhart, merchant, banker, shipowner and one-time secretary of the Niagara Harbour and Dock Company. The building should be considered as a handsome and substantial example of Niagara building of the immediate post-War of 1812 period. It is important to the streetscape occupying a corner position in the block.

Designated parts comprise the exterior envelope with attendant original detail excluding the eaves and cornice which appear to have been altered and could in future be restored. Original interior details including staircase, original mantelpieces, doors and architraves are also important.
