The house was built about 1830 for Rev. George Grout who served as Rector of St. Andrew's Anglican church from 1827 to his passing in 1849. At the time, the Bishop often referred to St. Andrew's as his "model parish". His son, John Henry, became a prominent industrialist and political figure. He founded Grout Agricultural Industries in 1856 and served as the first Reeve of the newly incorporated Village of Grimsby in 1876.

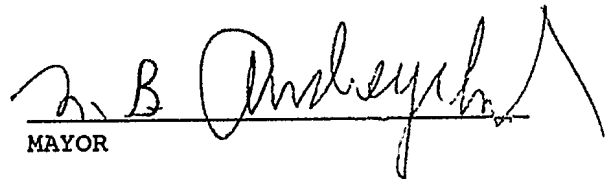

The building was constructed of cut limestone quarried from the escarpment above. The structure took on a georgian form with its simple massing of forms and symmetry. The home remains as a prominent feature along the historic Main Street corridor.
