Dr. Perry came to this area in 1811 after graduating from Sturbridge, Mass., Medical School and Fairfield College, New York. He purchased this land from William Teeple and while living in a log cabin on this Crown deed property he built his home. The house, the oldest in Woodstock, was completed in 1819, becoming a favourite stopping place for travelling preachers and others. Dr. Perry was the community's first doctor and teacher, and in 1841 led a citizens movement to unite the settlements of East and West Woodstock into one Town. He married Esther Burtch, daughter of Zachariah Burtch, Woodstock's first settler. He was a highly respected leader in the community and did much to help build early Woodstock.
