SCHEDULE "A" TO BY-LAW 2008-0004

REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

1. (a) The Glen Williams Town Hall has design value because it is an excellent example of the small hand-pressed red clay brick, measuring about 8.5" by 2.5" that was made just north of the village. The bricks are laid in a Flemish bond pattern, which is alternating headers and stretchers on each course. An alternating header and stretcher are used as the pattern for the brick header over each window.
  - (b) The windows are large double hung windows with nine panes of glass divided by wooden muntins within each sash. Each window sits on a heavy wooden sill being a full two inches thick.
  - (c) The front doors are two wooden doors measuring three feet wide by eight feet high. These doors are protected by the brick vestibule built on the front of the original building.
  - (d) The roof is pitched front gabled of wood frame with asphalt shingles. A gable return dresses up the gable end of red brick. The barge board is undecorated.
  - (e) The vestibule, added about 1981, complements the existing features and any future changes should retain this style.
2. The Glen Williams Town Hall has historical value due to an exterior made of local hand-pressed red clay brick, erected in 1870-71 by Georgetown builder Walter McKay. It has served the community in various capacities continuously since 1871.
  3. The Glen Williams Town Hall has cultural value because it has been the centre of village life since its opening. It has served the village socially, educationally, politically, religiously and in every possible capacity a community hall could be used for.
  4. The Glen Williams Town Hall is a typical example of a village community hall built of local brick in a colonial Cape Cod style. Its architectural features are the Flemish bond brick pattern, the double hung multi-paned windows and two large wooden entry doors. The hall has been central to the history of the Village of Glen Williams from its opening in 1871, being associated especially with Canadian author Lucy Maud Montgomery.
