SCHEDULE "A"

To By-law No. 92-65

"Moorecroft" was built as a single family home in 1896. Since that time it has been a dominant residence in Acton.

Historically, the first two owners of the home were significant local figures. H.P. Moore the original owner was the editor and owner of The Free Press, Acton's local newspaper. The house was sold to Wesley Beatty, manager of the Acton Tanning Company in 1926.

The house was built for H.P. Moore, by John Cameron an Acton builder, to a design by J.A. Ellis, a Toronto architect.

Architecturally, the house is two-storey with a large open attic space and basement. The silhouette of the house is asymmetrical typical of the "Queen Anne" style. The front of the house is dominated by a shallow curved two-storey balcony cover. The verandah and balcony roofs are supported on wood ionic columns. The house is constructed of red brick with a sandstone base and a sloped slate clad roof.

The interior of the house is graced with a panelled and carved oak main stair located off the front entry hall. The stairwell receives natural light through three stained glass window. Also, the front parlour and dining room have intricately worked wood and tile fireplaces, the former incorporating a stained glass window. Second floor bedrooms are equipped with unique operable transoms over entrance doors for cross ventilation.

"Moorecroft" remains and should be protected as a single family residence of landmark value to Acton.
