SCHEDULE "B"

Reasons for the designation of the Property at 2854 Dundas Street West (Former Bank of Toronto):

The property at 2854 Dundas St. West, formerly known as the Toronto-Dominion Bank, is designated on architectural grounds. It was built in 1911, as a branch of the Bank of Toronto, later the Toronto-Dominion Bank. It was designed by Eustace Bird, a Toronto architect in association with the New York architectural firm of Carrere and Hastings. Designed in the classical revival style, the three storey building, sheathed in stone, is symmetrical with regular fenestration. Important features include the chamfered corner of the building with entrance portico, Tuscan columns, entablature and balustrade, an arched recessed doorway with decorated surround, rusticated stone on ground floor, shallow pilasters and first floor cornice. Other significant features include the stone window surrounds, second storey bracketed window hoods and the third floor or roof cornice. The building at 2854 Dundas St. West was designed to acknowledge the important intersection at Dundas and Keele Streets, then the main crossroads of West Toronto Junction. The building is important in context with the three other corner buildings.
