SCHEDULE "A"
to By-law 11-029

LEGAL DESCRIPTION
OF THE COPELAND HILL CEMETERY

Part of Park Lot 42, west side of the Bay on Registered Plan 83,
Concession 13E and particularly described as Part 1 on Reference Plan
51R-36918 in the Township of Tiny, County of Simcoe
PIN 58406-0292

SCHEDULE "B"
to By-law 11-029

STATEMENT OF CULTURAL HERITAGE VALUE OR INTEREST OF THE COPELAND HILL CEMETERY:

The Copeland Hill Cemetery is of cultural heritage value and interest because of its association with the Wesleyan Methodist Church of the early 1800's - a church that held services with natives as early as 1829 to begin conversion to Christianity, because of the prominent local citizens buried there, and because the tombstones displayed run the gamut from simple and austere to grand - a hint into the lives of the pioneer families that lived in and developed this area. It displays a uniqueness not normally seen in most cemeteries. It features a well kept area of attended plots, a few tombstones that are relatively hidden in a forested area, and a dense bush that is part of the cemetery lands that on the original plan is "reserved for strangers."

DESCRIPTION OF THE HERITAGE ATTRIBUTES OF THE PROPERTY:

The attributes that express the cultural value and interest of the Copeland Hill Cemetery and make the subject property worthy of designation include:

- The variety of grave markers and monuments with inscriptions.
- The markers themselves from simple to grand displaying a cross section of the population of the time.
- The historical importance of some of the citizens interred include - Captain John Gundry Gidley listed as a Steam mariner in 1891 patriarch of the Gidley Boat Works in Penetanguishene who helped develop inboard marine engines with the Ford Motor Company. Gidley boats are still revered worldwide for their craftsmanship and quality. Upon his death John Gidley was considered to be the pioneer of Canadian watercraft. The Copeland family that donated the land for a cemetery to the Wesleyan Methodist Church in the early 1830's was a prominent industrial family of North Simcoe with vast holdings in timber and owned and operated many mills in North Simcoe.
- The cemetery's link to the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Penetanguishene and the fact that the church pastors were early missionaries intent on converting the native population to Christianity is very significant historically. The Wesleyan Methodist Church owed its beginnings to members of the garrison from Drummond Island that settled here after Drummond Island was returned to the Americans following the War of 1812. The church began with pastors travelling by horseback - their district ran from Owen Sound to Peterborough.
- The travelling missionaries are gone, the Methodist Church is gone, the United Church that sprang up from those humble beginnings is gone, all that remains in its original state is the Copeland Hill Cemetery to give us a window into the past.
- This small cemetery provides us with a direct link to the War of 1812, the beginning of interactive faith between whites and aboriginals in our area and contains the heritage of farmers, mill workers and industrialists that helped forge our community from the wilderness.
