REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

126 JAMES STREET SOUTH

Hamilton, Ontario

Founded in 1897 by Dr. C.L.M. Harris, the Hamilton Conservatory of Music completed construction of its imposing new premises at 126 James Street South in 1906. Situated on an elevated site just south of the railway underpass, the three-storey brick and stone structure serves as a significant component in one of the city's most important streetscapes. Architecturally, the Conservatory is a specialized building type, the only one of its kind to be erected in Hamilton. The architect was A.W. Peene, who later designed the Carnegie Library building on Main Street West.

During its eighty-three year history as the centre of musical education for Hamilton and the surrounding area, the Conservatory was a well-known and highly respected professional institution. With the closing of the school in 1980, this landmark, although converted to another use, continues to provide a tangible record of the Conservatory's important role in the musical development of Hamilton.

Important to the conservation of 126 James Street South is the preservation of the original features of the front facade, namely, the brick and stone construction, the front entranceway, the fenestration, and decorative trim.
