SCHEDULE "B"

THE FIVE-TO-A-DOLLAR STORE

This store was recommended for designation architecturally as a good example of late nineteenth century commercial architecture, altered little from its original design. The facade is framed by brick piers which are actually part of the buildings on either side; the scale of the building is particularly important in maintaining the streetscape. Iron posts, concealed by wooden mullions and resting on a concrete sill which stretches under the entire shop-front, provide the support necessary to the opening up of the lower storey. The glazing on the bottom storey is divided vertically, the larger plate glass being in a ratio of approximately four to three to the upper pane which is crowned by leaded, stained lights.

The upper storey bricks, buff coloured and stained red, are set in common bond, with alternating stretchers and headers taking the place of the usual row of headers. A pair of windows, symmetrically placed in this storey, are circumscribed with heavy cast-iron moulded surrounds. Attached to the ends of these are decorated scrolls which extend downward, framing the upper portion of the window.

The store was built late in 1893, the last of the brick stores to fill the area burned out in 1889. William Flood Senior, who had been owner of the Central Hotel (Paisley Inn) for ten years, had added a storey to the hotel in 1890, had completed the larger block to the north of this store in 1893, and finally filled the gap between his new building and the Elliot Block. His three buildings have the same cast iron mouldings over the windows. When Flood entertained Sir Wilfred Laurier in 1899 he no doubt pointed with pride to this store as the latest of his contributions to the commercial core of the Village.
