REASONS FOR THE PROPOSED DESIGNATION

197 CHARLES STREET

John Lewis, hardware merchant, built this home between 1872 and 1873. He had a hardware store on the east side of Front Street which opened in 1849. Mr. Lewis expanded his business to include a Spring Factory in 1868. He also had a steam saw mill on the Front of Sidney.

This red brick home is a combination of Victorian - Queen Anne and Second Empire style. It has a cross-gabled roof (mansard and pitched) and a tower nestled in the L.

The original facade has a closed-in porch with ornate brackets and wood trim on the pediment. On the north side of the closed-in porch was an open porch with square, paired columns, elaborate cornice and decorative balustrade. There were two tall chimneys on the south side which gave balance to the design of the home. The facade has been modified over the years and now features an open central porch with similar square columns supporting a more tailored pediment. The chimneys have been reduced to half their original size. The original slate roof is still intact.

There is a brick string-course between stories and the house is trimmed with a decorative wooden cornice which matches the cornice on the bay windows. The second storey round-headed windows are topped with prominent keystones similar to those in the tower. The tower also has a decorative wrought iron balustrade.

There was a two storey brick carriage house facing Bridge Street which has since become a store.

This beautiful home is situated among others of the same era and it contributes to the history and dignity of the neighbourhood.
