The church's construction was completed in 1842 and is settled amidst towering spruce, a cemetery including the local O'Brien family and mausoleum dating from 1913. The unusual craftsmanship of the structure is evident in the interior wood elements (pews, lectern, pulpit, plan flooring, wainscoting, ceiling beams and reredos and interior paneling with adze marks). The structure is built on a land grant provided to and then donated by Lt. Col. Edward O'Brien, a half-pay British officer who influenced the design and direction of the construction.
