SCHEDULE “A” TO BY-LAW 31-24

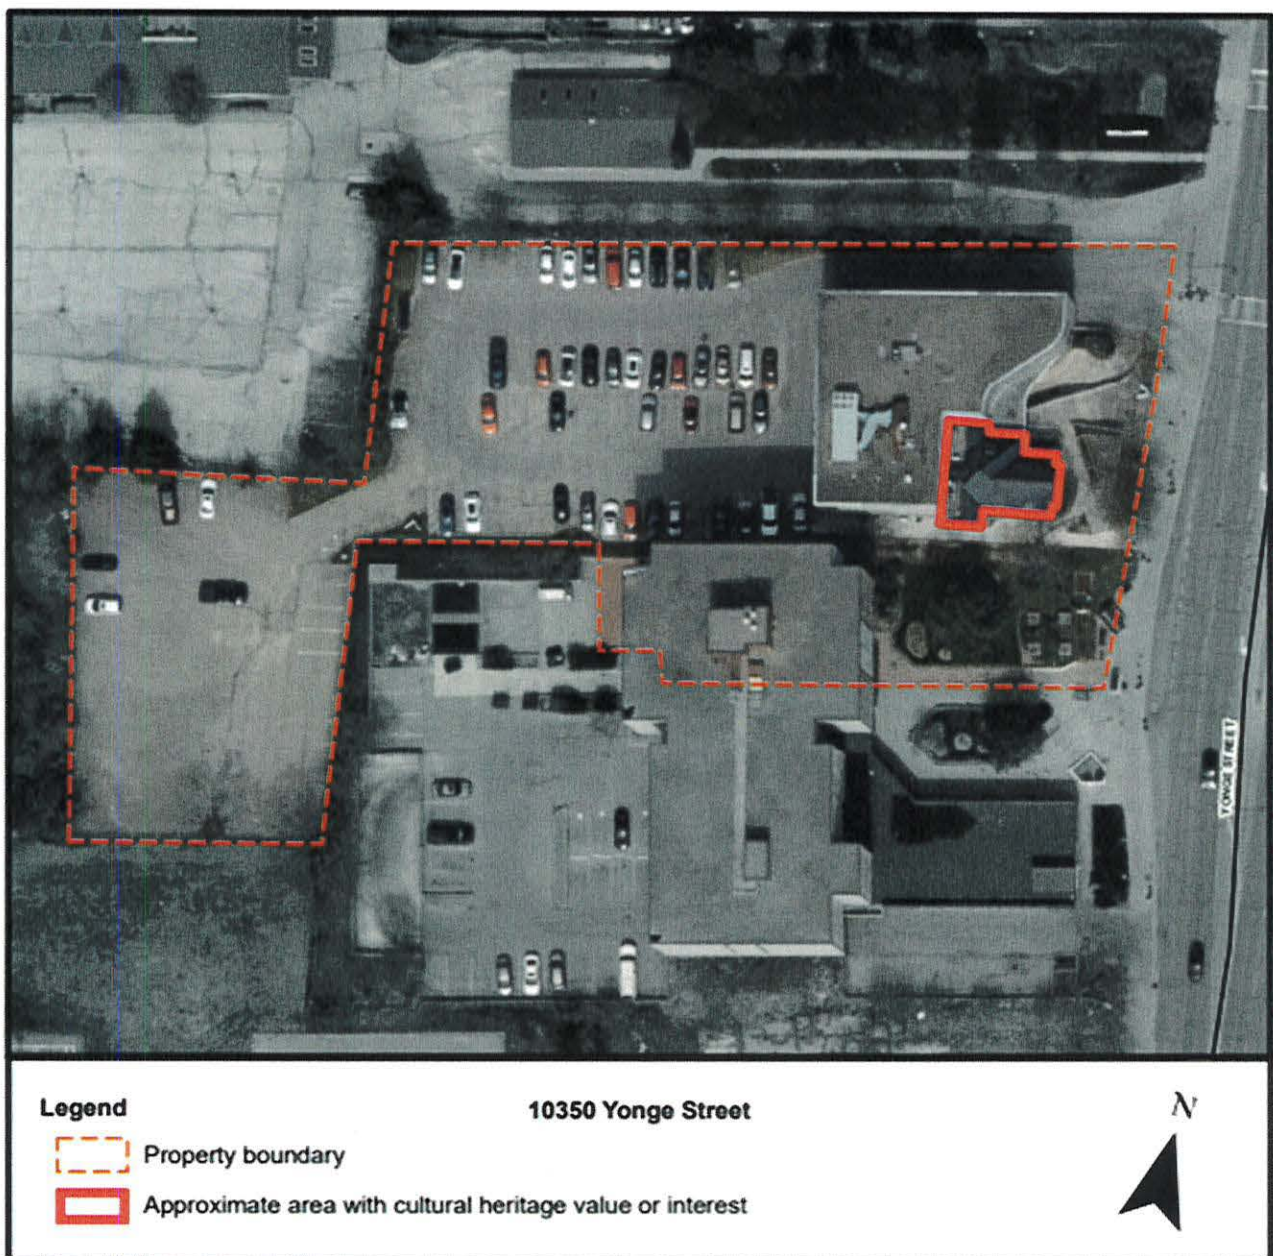

REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

10350 Yonge Street
The Andrew Newton House

Description of Property

The Andrew Newton House is a 2 ½-storey brick dwelling located on the west side of Yonge Street, south of Benson Avenue. The property is located at the northern edge of historic Richmond Hill village.

Area of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

Statement of Significance

Design and Physical Value

Dating to circa 1894, the Andrew Newton House at 10350 Yonge Street has design and physical value as a rare example of late-Victorian residential architecture in Richmond Hill that combines elements of both the Queen Anne and Richardsonian Romanesque styles. The building's original scale, form, massing, and orientation are still legible, despite being incorporated into a modern (1970s) office building. Further, many of the house's original architectural details representative of both the Queen Anne and Richardsonian Romanesque styles have been conserved, including the complex building and roof forms, bargeboard trim, rounded windows with rock-faced lugsills, voussoirs, and keystones, original wood and leaded art-glass window units, and masonry detailing including decorative stringcourses and terra cotta tiles.

The Andrew Newton House also has design and physical value for the high degree of craftsmanship and artistic merit displayed in a number of its features, including the rock-faced window surrounds, decorative stringcourses, leaded art-glass windows, and terra-cotta detailing.

Historical and Associative Value

The Andrew Newton House has historical value for its direct associations with both Andrew and John Earle Newton. Andrew Newton was one of the owners of the Newton Tannery in Elgin Mills; he built the existing dwelling circa 1894, and resided there until his death in 1912. "Earle" Newton was one of Richmond Hill's most eminent musicians; he founded the Richmond Hill School of Music, and used the subject dwelling (then known as "Rock Haven") to host music lessons and performances during the 1910s and 1920s. The house remained under the ownership of the Newton family until 1942. As local business leaders, employers, and active citizens, the Newton family were significant members of the community who contributed to the early development of Richmond Hill in the 19th century. The grand house at 10350 Yonge Street is also a rare surviving testament to the success of both the Newton family and the industrial hamlet of Elgin Mills during this period.

Contextual Value

The Andrew Newton House has contextual value because it is functionally and historically linked to its surroundings on Yonge Street. Located at the northern edge of historic Richmond Hill village, the house features a prime Yonge Street address representing the success of Andrew Newton, while also being proximate to both the amenities of the village and the family tannery business to the north in Elgin Mills.

 - A half-round attic window with a rock-faced stone lugsill, voussoir, and keystone, surrounded by angular-cut masonry detailing, and containing a period wood unit divided in three sections, with multi-paned sidelights.
