General Description of Property

49 Talbot Street South is located on the eastern side of Talbot Street within Essex Centre.

It is comprised of the Essex United Church: a large red brick church that was built in 1908 and expanded in 1958.

Description of Property that has Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The area of the property that demonstrates cultural heritage value or interest is the area that includes the original portion of the Essex United Church built in 1908.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

Historical/Associative Value

The property has historical value or associative value because it has direct associations with a theme, event, belief, person, activity, organization or institution that is significant to a community.

49 Talbot Street South retains significant historical or associative value because it has direct associations with beliefs, organizations, and institutions that are significant to the community. The Essex United Church served as a pillar within Essex Center, helping develop and maintain an important religious and communal space within the community from 1908 until its closure in 2024.

The Essex United Church is connected to one of the earliest Methodist congregations to have formed in Essex Center and the congregation dates back to the 1870s. The original church, the Canada Methodist Church, was built in 1876 and was located on the corner of Fox Street and Gordon Avenue. In 1884, the congregation of the church would grow as the community's two Methodist churches amalgamated and the church was expanded to accommodate this growth.

In 1907, the church was damaged beyond repair during the 1907 Essex Rail Explosion and the congregation opt to build a new church in 1908 on the present property. Construction of the new church was done under the congregation's guidance, and the cornerstone would be laid on May 25, 1908. The first service in the new church was held on February 28th, 1909.

In 1925, the church would officially become Grace United Church, with the amalgamation of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches of Canada and the establishment of the United Church of Canada. In 1946, the building would become the Essex United Church and in 1958, the church would undergo a massive expansion to accommodate the rapidly growing congregation. This expansion would include the addition of a new hall, several classrooms for the extensive Sunday School class, a vestry, boardroom, and a parlor.

The church's pipe organ would be installed in 1927 by the Casavant family of Quebec, who are famous organ builders who are known for their craftsmanship and have work across the world.

Contextual Value

The property has contextual value because it is important in defining, maintaining or supporting the character of an area.

49 Talbot Street South retains contextual value because it maintains and supports the character of the surrounding area through the materials used to construct the building being similar to the surrounding area. The red brick seen in the church can be seen in the homes at 54 Talbot Street South, 94 Talbot Street South, 98 Talbot Street South, and 102 Talbot Street South.

Alongside this, the building helps define and maintain the character of Talbot Street South due to its size. The buildings size helps define Essex Center's skyline and serves as a main focal point within the community.

The congregation of this church was comprised of the two congregations from the former Grace Methodist and the Methodist Episcopal Churches after they amalgamated in 1884. Following the 1907 Essex Rail Explosion, the congregation advocated for the construction of a new church and would lay the cornerstone of the new church on May 25, 1908.

The property has contextual value because it is a landmark.

49 Talbot Street South retains contextual value because it serves as a well-known marker within Essex Center due to both its size and longstanding history. It also serves as a defining feature of the community's landscape, an important feature in maintaining the area's character, and as a waypoint within Essex Center.
