SCHEDULE "B" TO BY-LAW NO. 2026-0001

REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

Description of Property

The property at 26 Wildwood Road is an irregular-shaped parcel located within the community of Glen Williams in the Town of Halton Hills, Ontario. The property is comprised of three village lots, four partial village lots, part of reserve park lots, and a closed road right-of-way. The property features a vernacular stone home with limestone at the first storey and half-timbering at the second storey, a gambrel roof, and stone quoining.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

Norton Cottage is a unique example of a c.1942 vernacular residential building with Dutch Colonial Revival and Tudor Revival influences in the Town of Halton Hills. Constructed of locally sourced multi-coloured cut stone, this residential building features a gambrel roof, flatheaded window openings throughout, dormers on the sides of the gambrel roof, and two stone chimneys. One chimney has since been capped, while the other chimney remains functional. The interior of the building features beams, and lower window casements, crafted with locally milled cherry wood. In addition to the beams, the interior features an original stone fireplace and mantelpiece. Constructed using sandstone sourced by trained local quarryman James Norton, and later dressed by stone mason Gerry Inglis, Norton Cottage features a high degree of craftsmanship and artistic merit with its unique stonework.

While the upper windows have been modified, the lower windows are original cherry-wood casements. Additionally, the original cedar shakes were replaced by asphalt shingles in July 2025. Despite these alterations, the dwelling remains a unique example of a vernacular residential building with both Dutch Colonial Revival and Tudor Revival influences.

Norton Cottage at 26 Wildwood Road has historical value due to its associations with locally trained quarryman, James Norton, and local mason and carpenter Gerry Inglis. Inglis was a well-known resident, who helped construct the Glen Williams Cenotaph, and aided in the restoration of the powder house in Limehouse Conservation Area. In addition to his work as a mason, Inglis was an avid hockey player, playing and coaching for the Georgetown Raiders. During his time as a coach, he led many teams to win multiple championships, with five of his higher-level players being drafted to the NHL.

In recognition of his work, Inglis was inducted into the Halton Hills Sports Museum in 2011. The former Confederation Bridge in Glen Williams was also renamed "Inglis Bridge" to commemorate the Inglis family's contributions to the community.

The property also has associations with the local Glen Williams quarry, the origin of the buildings stone. The stone construction reflects the importance of the quarrying industry to the village throughout the 20th century. The local stone from the Glen Williams quarry was also used in the construction of many prominent buildings such as Toronto Old City Hall, Casa Loma, and Queen's Park.

Norton Cottage at 26 Wildwood Road has contextual value as a sturdy house built for a working-class family and finished with local dressed sandstone quarried from the Niagara Escarpment, north of the village. Glen Williams stone was used in the construction of buildings like Toronto Old City Hall, Casa Loma, and Queen's Park. While difficult to see from the road because of tree growth, the house fits neatly into the side of the rock face, on a small plateau, commanding a view of the Credit Valley and the village.
