Description

210 Main Street is located within the historic core of the Village of Erin. The property consists of a two-storey Queen Anne building constructed between 1910 and 1912.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

210 Main Street is a representative example of the Queen Anne architectural style. The large two-storey building has protruding bays, a recessed entrance, and various projecting elements which creates an asymmetrical façade and overall irregular plan which is a key characteristic of Queen Anne design. The complex roof with wide overhanging eaves showcases decorative gabled pediments clad with fish scale siding and accented with a single round arch window opening which are also support the playful composition typical of the Queen Anne architectural style. The red brick building is contrasted with stone detailing showcased on the large rectangular window openings with monolithic heavy rock faced lintels and sills and in the surrounds of the rectangular door opening. The two-storey cantered bay window on the façade and two-storey square bay windows on the side elevation, both located under prominent gable pediments, and the one-storey wrap around verandah supported by rounded wood posts help demonstrate the variation and stylishness of Queen Anne architecture.

210 Main Street is directly associated with the historic core in the Village of Erin and local merchant David Russell. 210 Main Street is located within the historic core of the Village of Erin. The development of the historic core in the 19th and early 20th century played a significant role in the social and economic development of the Village of Erin. The lot lines, layout, and built form of the historic core is consistent with typical 19th century rural communities found throughout Ontario. 210 Main Street appears to have been built between 1910 and 1912 as a residence for general merchant David Coumts Russell and his family. David Coumts Russell was born on September 4, 1867, and married Elizabeth Young (1866-1951) in Dufferin, Ontario and together they had three children. By 1901, the Russell family was living in the Village of Erin, where David Russell operated a general store serving the local community.

210 Main Street is important in supporting and maintaining the late 19th and early 20th century character of the historic Village of Erin. The residential portion of the historic Village of Erin, which extends from the commercial core and into several side streets, was developed at the same time as the commercial core and supports the legibility and character of the overall historic village. Located on or just off Main Street, the historic residential buildings are comprised of predominantly one to two-and-a-half storey residences of primarily brick construction with modest setbacks. 210 Main Street exhibits the setback, massing, style and decorative details consistent with the character of the historic Village of Erin.
