SCHEDULE "B"

This building is designated on architectural and historic grounds. The corner section was built in 1829 by John Bishop, a prominent citizen and butcher in the Town of York, as part of a row of fine brick houses. 192-194 Adelaide Street West is one of the oldest residential buildings still standing in Toronto. The original buff brick Georgian style design is still visible and important although there have been later additions to the north and alterations at Street level.
