Architectural Reasons

Built circa 1875 this two storey vernacular building has both Georgian and Italianate influences. It was originally built as a double house, each residence having a side hall plan and three bays wide. Though not uncommon at the time, the six bay width gives this simple domestic structure an uncharacteristic monumentality. Constructed of white brick the house has many features typical of London architecture of the late 19th century including the double brackets at the eaves, tall corbelled chimneys at either end (only two extant - south elevation), brick framed by pilasters and arched windows with voussoirs. The eaves trough is copper and the original roof material was probably slate. There has been an alteration to the front entry, having combined the two entries into one entrance and built outward incorporating period brick and one of the original doorframes.

Contextual Reasons
