Reasons for Designation

16 Edward Street (on the east side between Elmwood Avenue and Bruce Street)

Architectural Reasons

Built in 1893, 16 Edward is one of the few examples in London of a small house with a mansard roof. It was built for Edward Parnell who owned the Parnell Baking Company. It is a one and a half storey, white brick building which includes several interesting aspects including dichromatic brickwork below the roofline, dormers in the mansard roof and a bay window on the south side. The double leaf doors with transom is noteworthy. A corbelled chimney is on the north side and the original roof material was cedar shingle.
