156 RANDALL STREET

The small frame house at 156 Randall Street was built c. 1850 by Charles Davis who was one of the first shoemakers to come to Oakville. The land on which the house stands today was originally owned by William Chisholm as part of his 960 acre purchase from the Crown in 1827 for the town site of Oakville. Subsequent owners of the property include William A. Buckle, John Wilson and Douglas Wilson.

The house is a representation of the Oakville vernacular style. Features of the house include the steeply pitched central gable in a medium pitch roof, an ornate Roman arched window and a symmetrical facade.
