SCHEDULE "A"

241 TRAFALGAR ROAD

The house at 241 Trafalgar Road was built circa 1870 and has been known throughout its history as "Potter's Folly" after the man who is believed to have been its builder, John Potter. The house is the only example in Oakville of the Italianate Villa style of architecture. Outstanding features include richly detailed cornice and roof brackets, classical window and door crowns, 6/6 double hung windows, original shutters and a tower balcony.

Potter's Folly is an attractive landmark, and an important contributor to the streetscape along Trafalgar Road. The house is one of a number of architecturally significant buildings located along this area of Trafalgar Road.
