A/CLERK

SCHEDULE "A" TO BY-LAW 1993-21

Munn's Pioneer Cemetery, located on the southeast corner of the Sixth Line and Dundas Street East, was established circa 1820 on land that had originally been owned by Daniel Munn.

Daniel Munn secured a Crown Grant as a settler on Lot 15, Concession 1, South of Dundas Street in 1808. Although primarily a farmer, Daniel Munn established a tavern and stagehouse on the northwest corner of his property. This was the first tavern and stagehouse in the Township and became very popular with travellers on the Governor's Road. As a result, the intersection of the Sixth Line and Dundas Street, and the hamlet that grew around it became known as Munn's Corners.

As one of the earliest settlers in this part of Trafalgar Township, Daniel Munn was responsible for felling the trees on the property he had been granted. The first crops grown by Munn were wheat and corn, planted among the stumps. In view of the harsh early years of pioneers such as Daniel Munn, the earliest settlers realized that the only way to "lift" their lives was to build community schools and churches. On Daniel Munn's property at Munn's Corners, a log cabin school was erected which doubled as a church on Sundays. With a church established, the Munn's Corners community realized that there was a need for a cemetery. As a founding member of the community, Daniel Munn responded to this need by selling a small plot of his land for a moderate price, to a group of local yeomen who were responsible for the establishment of the cemetery.

Daniel Munn's farm remained in the name of his descendants until it was sold in 1983. The Ontario Historical Society reports Daniel Munn's life era as being from 1774-1822.

A 1953 newspaper article on the cemetery cites Daniel Munn's headstone as being the oldest in the cemetery. Unfortunately, the headstone has been lost or so badly eroded over the past 39 years that the location of Daniel Munn's grave is now not known. It is believed, however, that the grave of Daniel Munn lies in the vicinity of his wife, Millicent, who is also buried in Munn's Cemetery.

The names of many of the area's earliest families can be seen in Munn's Cemetery. Among them are Appelbe, Snider, Featherstone, Post, Freeman, Coyne and Bowbeer.

For over fifty years, the responsibility for the care of the cemetery was placed in the hands of King Henry Munn, the son of Daniel Munn. After his death in 1906, the upkeep of the cemetery was the responsibility of those whose parents and grandparents were buried there. In later years, the Women's Institute of Munn's Church maintained the cemetery.

During World War I, it became increasingly difficult for the institute to find people who were willing to care for the cemetery. As a result, Munn's Cemetery became overgrown and neglected for over four decades. In the late 1950's the cemetery's importance as a historical site was realized by the local population and an extensive restoration of the site was undertaken.

CONTEXTUAL SIGNIFICANCE

At its setting on the southeast corner of Dundas Street and the Sixth Line, and across Dundas Street from Munn's United Church, Munn's Cemetery is an important reminder of the small Hamlet known as Munn's Corners.
