Dear Sirs:

RE: Notice of Intention to Designate
Part Lot 31, Plan 12
Village of Tweed.

This is to certify that the attached "Notice of Intention to Designate" was published in the Tweed News, a weekly newspaper having general circulation in the Village of Tweed, on July 28th, 1982, August 5th, 1982 and August 11th, 1982, and that no notices or petitions of object to the said "Notice" were received in the office of the Clerk-Treasurer by August 30th, 1982.

We realize that a copy of the "Notice of Intention to Designate" should have been sent to your office on July 28th, 1982 and we apologize for this omission. It is our understanding that the Tweed I.O.O.F. will not be proceeding further with the application to designate at this time but, in any event, a By-Law will not be passed for the next 30 days in order to give your office time to comment on this "Notice" if you desire.

Yours truly,

Northwestern Ontario told its employees that the proposed Whitewater Wilderness Park would cause the closure of its mills for several weeks each year. Yet the Ministry shows in its Nipigon District Land Use Plan that the park would have no such effect. Even with the largest park option, all forestry targets are met," he said.

The conservationists stressed that the answer to the forest industry's wood supply problems lies not in cutting within parklands, but in following proper forest management techniques.

"The sustained yield harvesting of productive sites, not a constantly expanding land base, will ensure future wood supply," said Nancy Patterindustry.

"Mining and forestry are not secure sources of jobs. Mining fluctuates with the economy and the size and quality of the ore body. The forest industry has mined the forests, and it is now committed to mechanization, which costs hundreds of jobs," said Arlin Hackman.

Mr. Hackman pointed out that many Ontario communities, such as Bancroft, Atikokan and Hearst, suffer because of their dependence on a single industry.

He said that the common view expressed by a forest industry spokesman, ("if we can't make money, then the forest is not worth anything,") threatens other legitimate values of the resource, and the

Towards a generation of non-smokers

"A broken cigarette is a little freedom gained" is the main theme of a new campaign promoting the benefits of life-style free of tobacco.

Health and Welfare Minister Monique Begin recently announced that the aim of "Generation" is to encourage young Canadians to become the "breakaway generation" — free from tobacco. She pointed out that already two-thirds of Canadians do not smoke.

"The values, attitudes and behaviours related to smoking begin to develop very early in life and continue through childhood and adolescence," the Minister explained. "Once individuals reach the age of 19 or 20 'smoke-free', it is unlikely that they will ever start smoking."

The program will continue for several years and is part of Canada's contribution to the World Health Organization's objective "health for all by the year 2000".

Promotional and educational materials will be made available to schools, day care centres and community associations to encourage children to make the decision to join the "breakaway generation".

make adults aware of how important it is that they set a positive example for the children by not smoking.

Since 1965, the proportion of Canadians smoking has dropped a full 10 per cent from 43 per cent to 33 per cent. The proportion of women smoking has remained fairly constant whereas the proportion of men smoking has dropped 15 per cent. During the same period, tobacco sales have increased both as a result of population growth and of increased consumption per smoker.

In the 15 to 19 age group smoking among males has decreased from 35 per cent to 26 per cent, while female smokers have increased from 20 per cent to 26 per cent. This increase occurred in spite of the fact that it is generally admitted that the use of tobacco is a cause of cancer and other illness, such as chronic bronchitis, emphysema and coronary diseases.

Your local lung association, the "Christmas Seal" people is actively supporting the Federal Government's "Generation" program. If you want to quit smoking, ask your lung association about the new FREEDOM FROM SMOKING self-help cessation program.
