Reasons for the designation of the Brantford Public Library Building at 73 George Street.

The Public Library built from 1902-4 is recommended for designation on historical grounds as one of the few remaining Andrew Carnegie libraries of such size and expense in Canada and, on architectural grounds, as representative of the Beaux Arts style. Quality features of the period include: a large portico supported by cement Ionic Pillars, buck pilasters, an embossed verse in Latin above the door (translated as "I have erected a monument more lasting than bronze), prominent windows with the names of English authors in relief at the heads, a metal dome, a marbled vestibule and a large rotunda. The sense of the monumental created by the tall flight of stairs, large portico and the delayed entrance through the vestibule and rotunda helps define the commanding atmosphere of Victoria Square.
