THIS IS SCHEDULE "B" TO

BYLAW NO. 128-91

STATEMENT OF THE REASONS FOR THE DESIGNATION OF 109 GRAND STREET

While the building at 109 Grand Street exhibits many features recognizable in the Brantford Cottages, it appears to be more of a forerunner to the popular diamond cottages found throughout the City. The later influx of diamond cottages in Brantford resulted in bigger, red-brick houses. The cottage at 109 Grand Street is constructed of buff sand brick, with a construction date of 1885.

The building is simple in design and detailing, having a straightforward three-bay facade under a low-hipped roof and centre gable, with the distinctive diamond-shaped window.

The double-hung wood windows have rounded heads and are topped with brick labels. The building has plain wooden soffits and a single-side chimney. Unlike the Brantford Cottages, this building has no frieze nor quoins.

The porch has a cement base and wood columns rising to a simple pediment. Except for the cement base, it is original to the front of the building.

The rear addition to the building, while not original, is of the same styling and material as the original. This addition has a low sloping roofline, and was used originally for kitchen and bathroom facilities.
