SCHEDULE "B" to Bylaw 1991-24

REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

The property known as 543 Timothy Street is recommended for designation for architectural and historical reasons. The building was constructed in 1912 according to the designs of Newmarket architect Oliver E. Tench for the woodworking division of the Office Specialty Manufacturing Company. The company, once the largest producer of wood and steel office furniture and equipment in Canada, operated in Newmarket from 1896 to 1971. The Toronto architectural firm, Allward and Guinlock, updated the principal facade in 1920.

The three -storey factory has a concrete base, solid red brick exterior walls, and a post-and-beam interior structure. The principal (south) facade, composed of the narrow two-storey end wall flanking Timothy Street, is organized into four bays by brick piers. The main entrance, offset in the first floor (second bay from the left), features a concrete doorcase with a Classical entablature and a floating transom, topped by a sculpted nameplate. The remaining bays in both levels contain triple six-over-six sliding sash windows with wooden mullions and lintels, and continuous stone slip sills. The facade is extended by a parapet roof with a moulded wooden cornice. The fenestration is repeated on the side elevations where ten bays are divided by concrete (basement level) and brick (upper floors) piers. The structure is covered by a flat roof terminating in a firebreak wall on the north end.

The Office Specialty Building (1912) is the earliest surviving component of a factory complex which extended along the railway tracks from Water Street past Timothy Street. The building is an important example of local industrial architecture, enhanced by its Classical facade.
