SCHEDULE "B"

TO BY-LAW NO. 85 -16

of the

CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF CAMBRIDGE

The Gore Tower in Centennial Park, municipally known as 170 Main Street, was designated because of its cultural heritage significance.

Description of Property

The subject structure is circular tower topped by copper cupola set on eight pillars and stands approximately two storeys high. It is located in Centennial Park, close to the Spruce Street entrance.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The Gore Tower was constructed in 1895 and was the central feature of the Gore Insurance building at the corner of Ainslie Street and Main Street. The building and its tower with cupola were designed by local architect Fred Mellish and constructed by contractors W. and F. A. Scott. The Gore Insurance building was demolished in 1971 but the Tower was saved, restored and stored privately until it was put on permanent display in Centennial Park in 1981. The copper and wood constructed Gore Tower was considered to be one of the finest tower and cupolas in the area.

Description of Heritage Attributes

The key exterior attributes which characterize the cultural heritage value of the Gore Tower located in Centennial Park at 170 Main Street are the:

- location in Centennial Park near the Shade Street entrance;
- hand molded metal panels and fixtures on the cupola;
- hand molded columns supporting the cupola on the tower portion;
- the spire above the cupola;
- wood structural frame under the moldings and copper
- copper sheeting on the tower support
- copper eavestroughs
