STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Description of Property – 'Squire' James Appelbe House, 3041 Postville Street

The property is located on the southeast corner of Postville Street and Squire Crescent, which is located near the intersection of Dundas Street East and Trafalgar Road. The property contains the historic house known as the 'Squire' James Appelbe House.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

Historical Value or Associative Value

The 'Squire' James Appelbe House has cultural heritage value for its historical associations with James Appelbe who constructed the house around 1866. Born in Ireland in 1802, James came to Canada around 1820 with his widowed mother. In 1831, he married a young widow named Jemima McDuffy, the daughter of early settlers Elizabeth Biggar and John Kaitting. They settled in the area of Post's Corners at Dundas Street and Trafalgar Road. James was one of the most successful figures in Trafalgar Township and became known by all as 'Squire Appelbe'. Starting as a storeowner and postmaster in Postville, he assumed a number of important positions during his life. James was one of the first directors of the Bank of Toronto, Justice of the Peace, Treasurer of Trafalgar Township, Recording Steward of the Nelson Circuit of the Methodist Church and President of the Trafalgar, Esquesing and Erin Road Company.

The property also has cultural heritage value for its historical associations with the Ford family who owned the property from 1882 to 1956. George and Jessie Ford farmed the property and likely built the two-storey brick addition onto the rear of the house between 1882 and 1891. The property was also briefly associated with Norman DePoe who owned the property with his wife Madeline from 1956 to 1966. DePoe is considered to be one of Canada's greatest television journalists and was a household name for many years. As the first full-time CBC correspondent on Parliament Hill, he covered many significant events, including elections, Winston Churchill's funeral, Canada's Centennial and the Quebec Crisis.

Design Value or Physical Value

The property is considered to have design and physical value for its c.1866 Gothic Revival style brick home. The Gothic Revival style was common in Ontario from 1830 to 1900 and one of the most common forms was the 1 ½ storey side gable 'Ontario Cottage' with a central gable featuring a pointed or rounded window. The Appelbe House is an example of this style and its design and materials are indicative of the relative wealth of owner James Appelbe.

The original brick house was constructed c.1866 and a brick addition was added to the rear in the late 19th century. The two historic portions of the house are constructed of solid brick, with the original house being covered in a cementitious coating. The symmetrical façade of the house is punctuated by a central door with a transom and side lights, as well as four unique full-length casement windows with transom windows, protected by storm windows. The front centre gable contains a rounded window opening and is decorated with wood vergeboard topped with a finial. The rear portion of the house includes a side porch on the east elevation.

Contextual Value

The property has contextual heritage value as a landmark along historic Dundas Street. While the house was relocated 95 metres from its original location to the southeast, the building's association with the historic village of Post's Corners and the significant route of Dundas Street remains. The house continues to be a significant reminder of the historically agricultural landscape of this area of Oakville.

The property also has contextual associations with the Mississaugas of the Credit who used the land prior to European settlement of this area. The property is contextually significant as a reminder of not only the development of the area by early settlers like the Appelbe family, but also of the land's association with Indigenous peoples for centuries prior to European settlement.
