REASON FOR DESIGNATION

Architectural Design or Physical Value:

The building was constructed by volunteers using a balloon framing technique with materials from the local sawmill. The stone foundation was laid in place in 1866 and the beam and wood flooring were installed in 1867. The bell tower and church bell were donated by Mr. John Hunter (considered to be the founder of Kinmount) in 1907 and the stained glass windows were donated circa 1923. The interior wall finishing includes unique wainscoting and the metal ceiling is reportedly preserved under the current acoustic-tile drop ceiling. Original pendant globe light fixtures are still in place.

Historical Significance:

The building was constructed as a Presbyterian Church of Scotland (circa 1867). Prior to construction of the church, religious services were held in private homes. Until the early 1880's the Anglicans, Methodists and Baptists also made use of the church for their services. In addition the church served as the first school in Kinmount. Over the years the church was also used for concerts, political debates, community meetings and council meetings. The building is the oldest publicly used building and the first place of worship in the community. The church continues to operate as an important place of religious practice and community participation in Kinmount.

Contextual Value:

The building is located at the top of East Hill and is considered a landmark to many in the community.

Attributes To Be Conserved:

- The building structure and façade including pitched roof structure, bell tower and front entrance
- Original stone foundations and foundation walls
- Original supporting beam
- Some interior components including the original wood floors, wainscoting, stained glass windows, and original metal ceiling.
