REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

491 PEARL STREET

Built in 1872 for Robert Hammond, a carpenter, this is a good representative example of a wood frame house built in the vernacular Gothic revival style. In the original Village of Burlington, there were several similar houses, of which few now survive. Although the original wood siding was reclad twenty years ago, much of the authentic carpenter's work remains: the end gables and small central front gable are decorated with fine "gingerbread" bargeboards, and the house also retains most of its original doors, windows, shutters, and trim. This house with its garden, located at the corner of Pearl and Maria Streets, makes a significant contribution to the preservation of this heritage neighbourhood's character.
