SCHEDULE "B"

REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

The property on which the house sits was originally granted by the Crown to John Hitchcock in 1797. The house was built for John and Elizabeth Moote around 1873 by builder Adam Huntsman, whose own house reflects a similar plan. Shortly before his death in 1891, John Moote deeded the land to his son-in-law Henry Stirtzinger, who was married to his daughter Margaret Jane. The property then changed hands several times, beginning first with a succession of Henry Stirtzinger's siblings. In 1946, the property was bought by Clifford Lane Comfort, then resold ten years later to Peter and Mary Lodde. During the Lodde's thirty year ownership, the house and a one acre parcel of land was severed from the property. It is presently owned by [REDACTED]

The brick house is a fine example of the late Gothic Revival style with pitched gables and corbeled chimneys on all four peaks that help to define a symmetrical greek-cross floorplan that includes a central staircase. Front-door corner enclaves are housed by mansard-roofed porches with decorative spandrel brackets, square posts with carved corner guards, turned balustrades and balusters, plus patterned trelliswork at the base. Most of the windows are topped with segmental arches and prominent keystones.
