SCHEDULE B
STATEMENT OF CULTURAL HERITAGE VALUE OR INTEREST

369 Frederick Street

Description of the Property

The subject property is municipally addressed as 369 Frederick Street in the City of Kitchener within the Region of Waterloo and the Province of Ontario. It is located on the south side of Frederick Street between Frederick Street and East Avenue in the Central Frederick Neighbourhood

The subject property includes an entrance canopy, a one-storey administration wing and a three-storey residential wing that is perpendicular to the administration wing. The building is situated on a 2.6 acre of land. The principal resource that contributes to the heritage value is the 1993 A.R. Goudie Eventide Home building.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The subject property demonstrates design/physical, historical/associative, and contextual values.

Design/Physical Value

The property demonstrates design/physical value as a notable example of the International Style of modernist architecture in Kitchener. The building is in good condition with many intact original elements since it was built in 1993. The building can broadly be divided into three main elements: the entrance canopy, the one-storey administration wing, and the three-storey residential wing perpendicular to the administration wing. The irregular plan of the building was done so to preserve the mature trees on site. The building features include: curtain walls made of smooth acrylic rendering in medium grey colour, yellow panels and red-painted shed roofs with pre-finished, red metal flashing, and curtain wall sections incorporating the yellow panels. Even though the International Style of modernist architecture is usually considered from the 1940s to the 1960s, the existing building exhibits many of the design features of that style.

Historical/Associative Values

The property demonstrates significant historical/associative value because of its direct association with the House of Industry and Refuge and its history of providing long-term care since it was opened in 1869.

The original House of Industry and Refuge was built after the passing of the 1867 Municipal Act which required all municipalities to provide support for residents 'requiring assistance'. In 1867, The County purchased a 141- acre farm from John Eby for $9,024. Then, advertisements were published for a contractor to plan and build the House from plans made by Joseph Hobson, County Engineer. Lewis Kribs was the successful contractor who was hired in 1868 for $8,908.

The House of Industry and Refuge opened in 1869, when it first admitted poor homeless children and unwed mothers, with the original building housing 100 people. The institution was originally intended to be self-sufficient by the residents contributing towards the farm and household chores. However, farming in a rapidly growing town of Berlin/Kitchener became increasingly problematic. Significant amounts of farmland ended up being lost, and to make up for those, three other farms were purchased, including the Shuh and Weber farms, and farming continued at the House until 1956.

The House began transitioning in 1919 from a “poor house” to an “old aged home” in 1947 when the Ontario Home for the Aged Act mandated service for seniors. The House was then changed to “Waterloo County Home for the Aged”.

The buildings were expanded on and new buildings added over the course of its existence. In 1956, a new home for senior was built on Franklin Street (now the current site of Sunnyside Homes). This property was then sold to the Salvation Army, who in 1962 constructed another building on the property. To meet rising demands, another building was built in 1993, which is the current A.R. Goudie Eventide Home. The building built in 1962 was demolished in the 1990s, leaving the A.R. Goudie Eventide Home as the only building on the property for a long time. This building was named after Arthur R. Goudie, who was a department store owner, and had made a major donation towards the construction of this building.

The building was then sold to its current owner, PeopleCare, in 2013 after the Salvation Army made the decision to withdraw its operations due to resourcing issues.

Contextual Values

This building has contextual value as it is the fourth building in succession of care homes on the site since 1869, yields information that contributes to the understanding of the community. It is also physically, functionally, and historically linked to its surroundings, existing on the original site of the House of Industry and Refuge. It also yields information that is important to the Kitchener's history, and how the city has developed.

Social Value

The existing property has social value because of its original institutional use. The property has been a site of refuge and assistance since the original building of the House of Industry and Refuge was built. The property, along with the existing building has made significant social contribution to the City as a place that initially provided a place of care for residents of Berlin/Kitchener, and till today provides a space for long-term care and assistance of residents of Kitchener.
