REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

Description of Property

The property at 12 and 16 Adamson Street South is located along the east side of Adamson Street South in the community of Norval, west of the Credit River. The property includes a one-storey frame church building within the north portion of the property and a one-storey parish hall building within the south portion. A paved parking lot is located between both buildings and mature trees are located along the rear (east) property line.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The property at 12 & 16 Adamson Street South has physical and design value as an excellent example of an evolved ecclesiastical landscape featuring a late-nineteenth-century wood-frame rural Gothic Revival church building and an early-twentieth-century parish hall in the community of Norval, within the Town of Halton Hills. The existing c.1845 church building is a representative example of a rural interpretation of the Gothic Revival church style using local wood and materials and has retained those features which are characteristic of the style including its symmetrical form, central tower with steeple, rectangular form with gable roof, and lancet-arched door and window openings. Stucco cladding has been extant on the exterior for over 100 years. The c.1927 Parish Hall, while modest in scale and architectural detail, is representative of an early-twentieth-century, purpose-built structure, with continued use by parishioners and members of the community since its construction. Together, these two structures make up an evolved ecclesiastical landscape that has existed in Norval along Adamson Street South since the church was first constructed in the mid-nineteenth century.

St. Paul's Anglican Church and Parish Hall at 12 & 16 Adamson Street South are significant for their association with the early Protestant Christian communities in Norval and the surrounding area, and with the growth of Anglican congregations within the Township of Esquesing. Located along the west side of Adamson Street South in Norval, the church and Parish Hall have a long association with the Norval community. The property is also associated with significant nineteenth century community members in Norval, including Colonel Peter Adamson, then the proprietor of the Norval Mills and prominent local figure, who donated the property at 12 & 16 Adamson Street South for the location of the church, as well as the land for the church's cemetery; postmaster William Clay and his family; and Norval Mill owner Robert Noble. Additionally, Canadian author Lucy Maud Montgomery, during the seven years she lived in Norval, held performances and plays within the Parish Hall, and occasionally attended services at the church.

The property at 12 & 16 Adamson Street South has contextual value as a long-standing ecclesiastical landscape along the west side of Adamson Street South in the community of Norval. A landmark along Adamson Street South, the white-stuccoed church with a central tower and steeple has been in this location for almost 180 years, while the modest parish building at the south end of the property has been extant for almost 100 years. While the property has evolved over time, the church and Parish Hall remain physically, functionally, visually, and historically linked to their surroundings within Norval, continuing to serve as a place of worship for members of the local community and, in the case of the Parish Hall, as a community centre as well.
