REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

Description of Property

The 1871 commercial building comprised of 61-65 Main Street South in Georgetown is located along the east side of Main Street South, north of Mill Street. The existing building is two storeys, with recessed storefronts and entrances above a single step at the first storey.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The Armour Block at 61-65 Main Street South has physical and design value as a representative 19th-century commercial structure within downtown Georgetown. The two-storey building height with red brick exterior at the upper storeys, round-arched windows with brick voussoirs, stone sills and keystones, and bracketed cornice, with dual storefronts recessed at the first storey, is reflective of typical commercial buildings constructed within Ontario during its period.

The Armour Block at 61-65 Main Street South has historical and associative value due to its associations with builder Nicholas Armour, a local chronometer and watch maker, as well as the property owners and businesses located within the building since its construction in 1871, including William Thompson's grocery store, the Wheeler Family (selling dolls and jewelry), J.F. Levinsky (selling boys and men's clothing), William Millar's department store, and Agonstino and Rosie Restivo's (later Dick Licata's and then Enrico Caruso's) fruit and vegetable store. The existing building has also housed chiropractic offices, a beauty shop, Goldham's Meats, a decorating centre, gift shop, and spiritual gift and service centre over the years. The subject property is linked to over 150 years of commercial development and services in downtown Georgetown and its uses have evolved over time since its construction.

The Armour Block at 61-65 Main Street South has contextual value as it is important in defining the built heritage character of the downtown. The existing two-storey building remains in its original location, physically and functionally linked to its surroundings as a commercial property on the Georgetown main street. The scale, form and massing of the building helps to define the historic streetwall along Main Street South in the downtown.
