SCHEDULE "A" TO BY-LAW NO. 2291

ALL AND SINGULAR that certain parcel or tract of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the City of Cambridge, in the Regional Municipality of Waterloo, (formerly in the City of Galt), and being composed of Part of Lot Number 29, according to Registered Plan D-7, and Part of Lot 1, South of Main Street, and West of Water Street, according to Registered Plan Number 615, and more particularly described as Part 2, according to Registered Reference Plan No. 67R - 1525; known municipally as 12½ Water Street, South.

SCHEDULE "B" TO BY-LAW No. 2291

The exterior of 12½ Water Street South, originally called the Galt Customs House and Post Office, now known as the Old Post Office, is designated for historical and architectural reasons. Historically, the building was designed by Thomas Fuller, Dominion architect, as one of many buildings intended by the government of Sir John A. Macdonald and his successors to impressively express the presence of the federal government across Canada. Fuller also designed the Parliamentary Library in Ottawa, which survives of his earlier Parliament Buildings. The Old Post Office building is dated 1885 and was constructed by Michael A. Pigott, founder of a construction firm that became internationally known.

Architecturally, the building is an eclectic mix of architectural styles, mainly French and Italian, but it is based on the popular 19th century Italianate style. It is built of pink and gray local granite finished in the rock-faced style, with limestone architectural feature work. The building has the most elaborate exterior in Cambridge. Outstanding architectural features include: mansard roof, deeply recessed windows, round-topped arches, entrance porch with tessellated marble floor, square tower and "apse-like" projection, gable bossage, massive chimney stack, slate roof, elaborate floor designs carved in stone, decorative iron grille and coloured glass windows. The building was meant to be seen from all sides and was finished accordingly.

DATED NOVEMBER 1ST, A.D. 1982.
