SCHEDULE “B” TO BY-LAW NO. 2024-0066

REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

Description of Property

The subject property is located along the southeast side of Queen Street in Georgetown within the Town of Halton Hills. The property is a rectangular lot, with Charity Street terminating at the southwest lot line, containing a two-storey L-shaped frame structure with cross-gable roof, brick cladding and a rear addition. Parking on the site is accessed from Charity Street at the rear. Like many of the houses along this side of Queen Street, the house is set back from the street on a hill and is accessed via a paved walkway and stairs.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The Wright Family Home at 14-16 Queen Street has physical and design value as an excellent representative example of a late-nineteenth-century Gothic Revival residential building, featuring a one-and-a-half storey L-shaped form, brick exterior, steeply-pitched roof with front gable and cross gables, decorative bargeboard with finials, a front bay, segmentally-arched window openings, an entrance with sidelights and transom, dichromatic brick, and a wooden verandah. The existing wooden finials, bargeboard and decorative detailing on the wooden verandah, and use of dichromatic brick throughout display a high degree of artistic merit, making this home stand out along the streetscape.

The property at 14-16 Queen Street is directly associated with the Wright family, and particularly Arvilla and Kathleen Wright. Originally built by carpenter Joseph McIntosh, the subject property was home to the Wright family for approximately 50 years. Harry and Arvilla Wright were the proprietors of the Exchange Hotel, originally located near the subject property along the Grand Trunk Railway Line. The Exchange Hotel, built in 1855 and no longer extant, was an important stop along the railway and became a hub for different commercial enterprises and services throughout its history. Arvilla Wright owned this property for several decades until it was owned by her daughter Kathleen (Kay), who also worked at the Exchange Hotel with her sister Dorothy and who also owned a popular store in Georgetown.

The property at 14-16 Queen Street has contextual value as it serves to define and maintain the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth century character of the area surrounding the railway. Located within the residential neighbourhood surrounding the current Georgetown GO station, the subject property is physically, functionally, visually, and historically linked to its surroundings. Located on a rise above Queen Street, the house is of a similar scale to the surrounding residences and has not been identified as a landmark in the community.
