REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

Description of Property

The property at 499 Guelph St is an irregularly shaped parcel at the intersection of Draper Street and Guelph Street in the community of Norval. The Credit River extends along the rear lot line of the property which features mature trees. The church is located within the southern portion of the property, which is accessed from Guelph Street, with a paved parking area extending along the east side of the church and towards the rear. A decorative wrought-iron fence partially extends along the south and west lot lines along Guelph Street and Draper Street, respectively.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The property at 499 Guelph Street has physical and design value as a representative example of a late-nineteenth-century Gothic Revival church, exhibiting many features typical of the style including its emphasis on verticality, string courses, hood moulds, pointed arch windows, the central buttressed tower, steeply pitched gable roof, leaded stained-glass windows. The existing church building has been well-maintained over its almost 150-year history and has retained most of its original features.

The property at 499 Guelph Street has significant value to its associations with early Protestant Christian communities in Norval and the surrounding area, and with the growth of Presbyterian congregations within the Township of Esquesing. Located along Guelph Street in Norval, the church has a long association with the Norval community. The property is also associated with local carpenter, architect, and builder Walter McKay, as well as the Reverend Ewan Macdonald and Canadian author Lucy Maud Montgomery, who served Norval Presbyterian Church between 1926 and 1935 and lived in the Norval Presbyterian Manse adjacent to the subject property.

The property at 499 Guelph Street has significant contextual value as it serves to define the character of the area within the community of Norval. Norval Presbyterian Church is physically, visually, and historically linked to its surroundings, with its historic relationship to the adjacent Manse and Caretaker's Cottage along Draper Street to the northwest of the subject property. In its existing location for almost 150 years, Norval Presbyterian Church is a landmark in the community at the corner of Guelph Street and Draper Street.
