SCHEDULE "A"

Description

The property at 18473 Main Street is a rectangular 1.51 acre parcel of land located on the west side of Main Street, approximately 250 metres north of Charleston Sideroad, in the former geographic Township of Caledon, Town of Caledon, Region of Peel. The property contains a one-and-a-half storey, red brick Gothic Revival Cottage-style former farmhouse with buff/yellow brick trim. Facing west, the farmhouse is set back from the road atop a rise. The property is accessed from Main Street by a treelined gravel driveway to the south of the farmhouse. Dry stone walls demarcate the front of the property and both sides of the driveway.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The design value or physical value of the property at 18473 Main Street is linked to its one-and-a-half storey red brick farmhouse. Constructed in the early 1880s, it is a well-designed Gothic Revival Cottage-style structure that incorporates pointed arched gable windows, a grand front entrance with transom flanked by rectangular, two-over-two sash windows, and decorative dichromatic brickwork. Overall, its detailing and craftsmanship are representative of a house constructed for a prosperous farming family of the late 19th century.

The property has historical and associative value for its long-standing association with the Coulter family, who owned and lived in the farmhouse from the early 1880s to 1959. William Coulter, the son of early landowner Andrew Coulter of Etobicoke, was the first of the family to reside on the lands and farm full time. The property also has historical value and associative value for its early use as a tourism event centre in Caledon Township. From the late 1920s to the late 1950s, William's son Robert Coulter and family hosted highly popular garden parties on the farm, in addition to offering seasonal cottaging, camping and fishing activities. Attendees and musicians from across the province and northern United States would visit the property to take advantage of events on site.

The property has contextual value for its contribution in defining, maintaining and visually supporting the rural character of Caledon Township. It is also physically, visually, and historically linked to its immediate surroundings and other nearby historic properties, especially those that were part of the informal hamlet of Coulterville. The Coulter farmhouse, sitting atop a rise of land, surrounded by landscape features including dry stone walls and mature tree rows, is a landmark in the area for residents both past and present.
