SCHEDULE “B” TO BY-LAW 2025-19

STATEMENT OF CULTURAL HERITAGE VALUE

13 Peel Street is a representative example of the Queen Anne architectural style with Edwardian Classicism detailing. The two-and-a-half storey residential building has an irregular plan and a steeply pitched, combination roofline which includes a bellcast, Dutch gable hip roof intersecting with a bellcast hip and valley roofline and connects to bellcast gable rooflines on the façade, north elevation and south elevation. The residence has several elaborate decorative elements including bracketing with sun-motifs, fish-scale shingle cladding, decorative woodwork and most prominently an open porch with strong Classical detailing that spans the length of the façade. The residence's asymmetrical composition and elaborate decorative detailing convey a sense of playfulness that is typical of Queen Anne design. However, the smooth brick masonry with fine joints, large, relatively plain, flat arch lintels and use of Classical detailing showcase elements of the more restrained Edwardian Classicism style. The two-storey auxiliary building on the property corresponds with the residence with a steep hip roof that matches the pitch of the residence and red brick exterior with a stone foundation.

13 Peel Street is associated with Dr. Patrick McDonald, a local physician and the head of the town's Medical Health Board. Dr. Patrick McDonald was born in Glengarry, Ontario and graduated from McGill University in 1893. After moving to Penetanguishene in 1897, Dr. McDonald worked as a doctor in the town and built the residence at 13 Peel Street (the subject property) in 1909 as a house for himself, his wife Teresa, and their five children. Dr. Patrick McDonald played an important role in social and civic matters which contributed to the educational growth and health of the Town. McDonald served as the chairman of the High School Board of Penetanguishene, and as the chairman of the Town's Medical Health Board. In addition, Dr. McDonald also served on the committee that was responsible for the completion of St. Anne's Memorial Church and was mentioned by Archbishop of Toronto Denis O'Connor for those efforts.
