SCHEDULE “B” TO BY-LAW 2025-20

STATEMENT OF CULTURAL HERITAGE VALUE

21 Peel Street is a representative example of a modest interpretation of the Italianate architectural style. While lacking some of the elaborate decoration associated with Italianate architecture, the two-storey rectangular plan building maintains the form and massing associated with the style. 21 Peel Street has a hip roof with a symmetrical façade and is constructed of red brick masonry with a prominent frontispiece containing the façade entrance. The brick masonry, which rests on a random ashlar stone foundation, features protruding brick courses along the corners of the building and frontispiece, above the foundation and along the top of each storey. In the absence of quoins and dichromatic brick typically seen in Italianate buildings, this brick detail accentuates the edges and massing of the structure.

21 Peel Street is associated with Dr. B.T. Gahan, who constructed the house, and George Robinson, a hotel manager who occupied it with his family between 1902 and 1951. Dr. Beresford T. Gahan was a local physician who was born in India in 1844. He moved from Toronto to Penetanguishene where he worked as a doctor and constructed the house at 21 Peel Street in 1882 as a private residence for himself and his family. Dr. Gahan sold the property to a druggist in 1896 and moved to British Columbia. 21 Peel Street was purchased by hotel manager George Robinson in 1902. George Robinson managed The Penetanguishene Summer Hotel, a well-appointed inn constructed in 1889 to cater to Georgian Bay’s summer tourist industry of the late 19th century. The hotel burned down in 1917, and George Robinson became a merchant and tailor. George Robinson was civically minded and served on the Penetanguishene Town Council in 1905 and again in 1915-1916. George Robinson lived in the house at 21 Peel Street until his death in 1948, and his wife Mary and daughter Margaret continued to occupy the property until 1951.

21 Peel Street is important in supporting and maintaining the late 19th/early 20th century character of the historic Town of Penetanguishene. 21 Peel Street is located within a residential block developed in the 19th century. While many residences along Peel Street have been modified, 21 Peel Street’s materials, scale, massing and architectural detailing maintain, contribute and support the legibility and character of Penetanguishene as a historic village.
