SCHEDULE "B"

Reasons for the designation of the property at 2 Strachan Avenue (Horse Palace)

The property at 2 Strachan Avenue, is designated on architectural and historical grounds. It was built by the Canadian National Exhibition in 1931 following the designs of Toronto architect J.J. Woolnough, then City Architect. The tall two-storey buff brick and stone building is an excellent example of the Art Deco style in Toronto. The plain horizontal form of the building is highlighted by extensive decorative elements.

The south and west facades are symmetrical with balanced fenestration. Important features include the finely detailed south and west entrances with corresponding towers, fenestration patterns, very fine doorways, embellished window spandrels, coloured glass, and low relief sculptural friezes of animals and lettering. The interior of the Horse Palace is also architecturally important, particularly the stair railings, ramps for horses, stalls with metal details, interior skylights and light fixtures. The Horse Palace building expresses the continued interest in a tradition of fine architecture in Exhibition Place buildings that had been established by the CNE from its early days.
