SCHEDULE "B" - 18297

Reasons for the designation of the "Laskey Hotel" at 15 Port Union Road.

"Laskey Hotel" : This building is the last nineteenth century hotel structure left in Scarborough. Built in the typical hotel style of that era, the building is a duplicate of a Helliwell's Hotel which was destroyed by fire and of the Halfway House relocated at Pioneer Village. Architecturally the building is a good example of an early nineteenth century Upper Canadian vernacular hotel structure, featuring two storey dimensions with medium pitched gable roof and a symmetrical five bay south front facade with two-storey veranda.
