The exterior of this property is recommended for conservation as property having historical and architectural value or interest by the Local Architectural Conservation Advisory Committee of the City of Hamilton, and in the "Architectural Review and Evaluation Report" prepared by Professor Anthony Adamson.

Built in 1860, the house is styled in the Georgian tradition. The foundation, side and rear walls, are of rubble stone while the base course, lugsills and lintels are of cut stone. The facade is of red brick with quoins of yellow brick. The front entrance incorporates a four-panelled door, square headed transom and side lights. The windows are six over six double hung sash.

Situated in Corktown, one of the earliest residential neighbourhoods in Hamilton, the building represents the upper class housing of the area, and is typical of Hamilton homes common before the widespread introduction of picturesque Victorian forms. Originally owned by a police constable/tavern keeper, it later served as a Female Home, then went through a series of family owners.
