The Henry A.L. & Amelia Honor House is a unique example of early 20th Century modern architecture in a classic Arts & Crafts style residence. The Honor House cultural heritage value is unique in the association with Thomas Lukes. Mr. Lukes came to Amherstburg in 1875 to work as head sawyer at the Park and Borrowman Planing Mill located on the Old Malden Lunatic Asylum. He built the first new house on Rankin Avenue. He was a local designer and cabinet maker and also Town Councilor during the late 1800's to mid 1920's. Thomas Lukes was an owner of his own furniture making shop, with examples of his finish work including: Wesley United Church 1892, Amherstburg Post Office 1886, Franklin Hough House, Laird Avenue 1918, he also designed and oversaw the building of several homes including the Honor House in 1920.
