HISTORICAL - ARCHITECTURAL

The fine dwelling built in the early 1850's was originally made of yellow white brick but was later given a unique red glaze with the mortar lines painted on. Extensive renovations were made to the home by its then owner, James Norsworthy, in the 1880's. The home has a variety of stylistic traits including turrets, bays, chimneys of cut brick, multicoloured brick work, slate roofs, stain glass windows and gingerbreading under the eaves and in the area of the second storey balcony. A pillared cut stone porch and library bay window, as well as extensive interior renovations appear to have been done around the time of World War 1.

This 21 room, 3 storey home exhibits a number of fine wood carvings from the hand of a well known local woodcarver, F. P. Leake. In addition, the elaborate ceiling frescoes and coverings were installed by the Late Leslie Daniel, a local plasterer.

The original owner of this home was Nathaniel Whiting, an early resident of Ingersoll and for whom Whiting Street is named. It passed on to Alex Cuthbert whose daughter, Mary Jane, married James Norsworthy. Mr. Norsworthy, a successful local businessman, was responsible for much of the improvements, both interior and exterior, to the building prior to 1914. The Home was owned and occupied by [REDACTED]
