REASONS FOR DESIGNATION - 5 PADDINGTON AVE.

Short Statement:

This early farmhouse is a good example of Ontario vernacular in the Georgian Style. It was originally in Westminster Township and became part of the City of London in the 1961 annexation.

Historical Value:

It was built ca. 1849 by James McArthur. The son, Alexander began managing the property around 1860 and it later became well known as the Alexander McArthur farm. The property stayed in family hands until 1914.

Architectural Value:

5 Paddington Ave. is a two-storey 3 bay white brick farmhouse with Georgian influences such as the medium pitch gable roof with return eaves and windows and door openings that have a symmetrical composition. There is a generous amount of wall space in relation to the size of the windows. Added later was a fully enclosed glass pane window porch replacing the original verandah.

The attributes that are worthy of preservation include the symmetrical façade, return eaves, doorway with sidelights and transom of clear glass and transom.

Contextual Value:

This property and surrounding lots sold off by the McArthurs forms the majority of what is now Manor Park subdivision. The character of the area has gone from a rural environment to part of a developed residential neighbourhood.. It is one of the oldest original farmhouses surviving in the old south area of London.
