SCHEDULE "B" to Bylaw 1988-143

The Property identified as the T. J. Robertson House at 115 Main Street South is worthy of designation for historical and architectural reasons.

The brick residence was built in 1873 by John W. Hughes and sold to John W. Marsden, a local businessman, the following year. The building is more closely associated with Thomas Jaffery Robertson, a lawyer and Mayor of Newmarket (1894-1896) who lived in the house prior to purchasing the site in 1896.

The brick residence (currently painted) is an excellent example of the Italianate Villa style of architecture. The style is evident in the two-storey cube-shaped plan, with two adjoining wings identical in height. The individual parts of the dwelling are covered by separate hip roofs with extended eaves. Two tall brick chimneys are found on the main body and the north wing. Most windows display segmental arch openings with louvered wooden shutters. On the facade (west), the main body forms a projecting frontispiece containing the principal entry and an adjacent French window. The doorway is sheltered by an open single-storey wooden porch with turned posts, decorative woodwork under the eaves, and crenellated rooftop. Similar porches are found on either side of the frontispiece where the wings join the main body.
