SCHEDULE "A" TO BY-LAW 1993-52

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE

Joshua Leach, who was born in the United States in 1776, moved to York in 1797, where he worked at this trade of carpentry. In 1822, he bought 200 acres east of what was to be the Town of Oakville, where he built a home and established on Joshua's Creek, a saw mill and a threshing mill. His sons, Ransom, William and Robert also became carpenters and joiners and built many homes in Oakville and vicinity. In 1844, the mill was taken over by William, and Joshua built a retirement home for his wife and himself on property he had bought in 1834 south of Lakeshore Road. This house changed hands several times after Joshua died in 1862. In 1922, it was moved by its then owner, Mr. James Ryrie, to its present site for use by his estate manager. The current owners restored it to its present condition.

The house is a Georgian-styled 1 1/2 storey cottage, which still retains inside and out much of the fine detail and workmanship of its master builder. Although altered somewhat by present owners, changes have been compatible with the original design.
