ONTARIO HERITAGE TRUST

MAY 25 2017

RECEIVED

Take notice that Toronto City Council intends to designate the lands and buildings known municipally as 1433 Bathurst Street under Part IV, Section 29 of the Ontario Heritage Act.

Reasons for Designation

The property at 1433 Bathurst Street (including the entrance address at 1431 Bathurst Street) is worthy of designation under Part IV, Section 29 of the Ontario Heritage Act for its cultural heritage value, and meets Ontario Regulation 9/06, the provincial criteria prescribed for municipal designation under Part IV, Section 29 of the Ontario Heritage Act under all three categories of design, associative and contextual value.

Description

Located on the northeast corner of Bathurst Street and Melgund Road, one block south of St. Clair Avenue West, the property at 1433 Bathurst Street contains the Wychwood Branch of the Toronto Public Library, which was completed in 1916 according to the designs of Toronto architect Eden Smith. The property at 1433 Bathurst Street was listed on the City of Toronto Inventory of Heritage Properties (now known as the Heritage Register) in 1976.

Statement of Significance

The Wychwood Library has cultural heritage value as an excellent example of a custom-designed library with features of the early-20th century Neo-Gothic style influenced by the Arts and Crafts Movement with its features drawn from English medieval architecture and traditional craftsmanship. Its design is distinguished by the steeply-pitched gable roof, the stepped buttresses, and the Tudor-styled windows with the stone embellishments, as well as the first-floor interior reading room that resembles a medieval Great Hall with its high timber-frame ceiling, minstrel's gallery and large stone fireplace that is repeated in the basement level. The Wychwood Library set the precedent for the near-identical High Park and Beaches libraries.

The Wychwood Library is valued for its historical association with the Toronto Public Library Board, which was organized in the late 19th century to plan and build publicly-funded libraries in the city. With the rapid growth of Toronto in the early 1900s, and under the leadership of Chief Librarian George H. Locke, the Toronto Public Library Board accessed funding from the famed Carnegie Foundation of New York (which financed over 100 libraries in Ontario) to expand its library system, including in 1916 the collection of three branch libraries whose opening coincided with the tercentenary of the death of William Shakespeare. Wychwood was the first of the trio to be completed, and reflected the ideals of Locke with its design inspired by 17th-century English grammar schools that incorporated the innovative programming of the period with separate areas devoted to adults and children. In continuous operation for over a century, the Wychwood Library celebrated its centennial in 2016.

The associative value of the Wychwood Library is also through its connection to Toronto architect, Eden Smith, who designed the building. Eden Smith was considered Toronto's foremost Arts and Crafts practitioner who was best known for his design of St. Thomas Anglican Church on Huron Street, as well as residential projects on Indian Road and in neighbouring Wychwood Park, the community that developed as a unique artists' colony and was the first residential Heritage Conservation District in the city.

With his commissions for the Wychwood Library and the near-identical branches for High Park and the Beaches, Eden Smith was the first architect engaged by the Toronto Public Library Board to design a collection of buildings.

Contextually, the Wychwood Library is historically, visually and physically linked to its setting on the northeast corner of Bathurst Street and Melgund Road, south of St. Clair Avenue West, where it stands as a local landmark in the Casa Loma neighbourhood.
